OLD DREAMS.

Where are thy footsteps I was wont to hear,
O Spring, in pauses of the blackbird's song?
I hear them not; the world has held mine ear
With its insistent sound too long, too long!

The footfall and the sweeping robes of Spring,
How, once, I hailed them as life's full delight!
Now, little moved, I hear the blackbird sing,
As blind men wake not at the sudden light.

Nay, not unmoved? But yestereve I stood
Beneath thee, throned, queen songstress, in the beech;
And for one moment heaven was that greenwood,
And the old dreams went by, too deep for speech.

One moment—it was passed; the gusty breeze
Brought laughter and rough voices from the lane;
Night, like a mist, clothed round the darkening trees,
And I was with the world that mocks again.

So near is Eden, yet so far; it lies,
No angel-guarded gate, too far from sight;
We breathe, we touch it, yet our blinded eyes
Still seek it every way except the right.

THE COQUETTE'S LOVE.

"ARE you engaged to be married to Charlie Danforth, Kate?" asked Ann Duncan of her friend.

"Pray why do you ask that question?" retorted Kate Landon, rather peevishly.

"I asked merely for information," replied Ann.

"Well, what put such an idea into your head? I cannot guess who told you. I am very sure I never lisped such a thing."

"Such is the current report, Kate. You have not told me whether it is true; but I mistrust it is."

"Yes, I'll own it, Ann; though I'm ashamed to."

"When are you going to be married? or don't you intend to be married?"

"I told him I would be married next winter, but I won't. I am tired of him already."

"Kate Landon," said Ann, "will you promise to answer me one question, if you can?"

"Yes, half a dozen, if they are not too silly."

"How many times have you been engaged, then?"

"'Pon my word, I don't know. Twenty times, I guess."

"As many as that to my knowledge,' said Ann.

"Yes," said Kate, "there was Will Harley. He was such a wit that I told him I would have him for the sake of laughing; but I soon got tired of his folly, and told him so. And Captain Stanton, with such beautiful, curling moustaches! I never liked him. I only engaged myself to him for the sake of teasing Fan Lawrence. And Burwell; I don't know why I flirted with him, except it was because no one else offered himself just then. And there was Mr. Higgins, with a most beautiful hand and foot! But I found he wore tight boots, and I would not have him. Who would? And young Simper, who looked so sentimental, and always talked of love and moonlight! I concluded he must be the man in the moon, and I should not like to live in moonshine always. And there was Wilmerton, who looked so silly, and never said anything worth mentioning in his life. But I never engaged myself to him. I flirted with him till he made me an offer, and then refused him. And Jenkins! Good reason why I refused him. The only question in my mind is why I ever engaged to marry him. And Simpson — his father was rich, but I found that he was stingy. There is a host of others, but I am tired. They call me a coquette, but I don't care. I won't have anybody I don't like; and if I find it out after I am engaged to them, I'll break off the match."

"I would not have any one I did not like either, Kate; but why did you not mention Henry Eaton in your catalogue! I thought he stood at the head!"

"Because I did not want to, Ann. I do not like to speak of him with those fellows."

"But you were engaged to him, were you not?"

"Yes; we promised to have each other when we were children, and renewed the promise once a week regularly, until he went away."

"Why did you then break the engagement? I should have thought it was so strong, no power on earth could have done it."

"I thought so once, but I have grown wiser. I have found by sad experience that vows are things of air."

"But you really loved Henry, once?"

"Yes, and always have and do yet."

"Why, what made you refuse him, then?"

"I did not refuse him, Ann. The fact is, that Henry Eaton was poor, and he felt it. Edward Leslie's father was very wealthy; he had just returned from college, and frequently came to see me, though for nothing more than friendship, and because we were children together, as you yourself know.

"Henry was a little jealous; he hinted his suspicions to me.

"I was angry that he should suspect that I could love any one more than him, and especially that I loved him less because he was poor.

"I told him, in a pet, that if he thought me so fickle, he could be released from all childish engagements.

"This only confirmed his suspicions; he left me. I received a letter of farewell from him.

"Where he went, I never knew. He has probably forgotten me, and given his heart to one more worthy of him; but I have not forgotten him, and never can.

"They call me a heartless coquette perhaps Henry does. I was not a coquette then, though I have been since.

"My heart is given to Henry, but I have lost his."

"But, Kate, if you have loved no one but Henry Eaton, why have you so often promised to marry others? Was it for the sake of breaking your promise?"

"No, not exactly that, I hardly know why I have done so. I have given you the reason for some of my engagements. I did not know but I might forget Henry, and love some other one—but I cannot; sometimes I did it for fun, and sometimes I was altogether reckless. But I will never promise to marry again. I'll tell Charles Danforth I cannot love him, and live a nun for Henry's sake."

"See that you keep that resolution," said Ann, laughing at Kate's sober conclusion.

"Oh! I'm in earnest. I'm tired of hearing of broken hearts and dying lovers. There is no sense in it. I am tired of being called cruel and hard-hearted. I'll give no more occasions for silly words and sickening sonnets. I am really determined to take the veil."

"Perhaps you are serious, but I'll wager a diamond ring that you'll be engaged again before the end of the winter."

"I don't think I shall have much need for diamond rings in a convent," said Kate; "but I'll accept your bet, for I know I shall win and it shall remain a lasting witness that I have, at least, kept one promise."

Thus the bet was agreed upon.

Kate Landon had determined to become a nun, and immediately wrote for admission to a convent in the following spring.

I don't know but she would have taken the veil the next day after her conversation with Ann Duncan: but Ann was to be married in a few weeks to Edward Leslie, and Kate had promised to be her bridesmaid.

This, like the promise between Kate and Henry Eaton, had been made in childhood and ratified ever since.

If Kate was married first, Ann was to be her bridesmaid; and if Ann was married first, Kate was to be hers.

Though Kate had made twenty promises to her beaux, and broken them all; and though she had declared that vows are things of air, yet these two promises she had ever considered sacred; and though her promise to Henry was now void, yet there were moments like that in which she had conversed with Ann Duncan, when she felt that perhaps it was binding, and she would live in seclusion rather than trifle with or break the engagement.

The promise she had made to Ann though of minor importance, was also a promise of childhood, and now remained in full force; and Kate deferred entering the convent, in order to fulfil it.

Ann's wedding was a joyous occasion to all save Kate Landon. It had been long wished for and expected.

The parties were wealthy, and young, and handsome, and happy in each other's love.

The wedding party was large and fashionable. The apartments were splendidly adorned and lighted up. The refreshments were rare and sumptuous.

The bride was elegantly arrayed. She looked almost as beautiful as Kate.

The bridegroom looked better than usual, though Kate thought not so well as Henry Eaton.

But all this happiness, elegance, beauty and bliss had no charms for Kate.

She had dressed herself richly, and with taste, and looked beautiful; for she could not look otherwise.

She looked happy and pleased, for she would not look otherwise at Ann's wedding; yet she felt that such a festival might have been, but never would be for her.

That all those happy smiles and joyous wishes and bridal kisses might have been lavished upon her who soon would be so lonely.

When she looked at Edward, the happy bridegroom, she thought of Henry and their sad parting, and longed for the sad cell of the convent—the holy cloister of the devoted nun.

Gay music echoed through the festive halls. Youth and beauty joined in the "light-toed dance," but as Kate accepted the hand of the first groomsman to join in the quadrille, she felt that it was for the last time.

Her partner was a young gentleman from India. He had just arrived.

Kate had been introduced to him as Lieutenant Atwood, an old friend of Edward Leslie's, who had returned in order to visit his friends, and be present at Edward's wedding.

He was tall, erect, and of a fine figure; with large, regular features, and dark, expressive eyes.

He was noble, dignified and commanding in his bearing; graceful in the dance—all that a girl could love.

Before they had finished the first set, Kate was deeply interested in his conversation, and thought he bore a strong resemblance to Henry Eaton.

She was tired and did not join in the second quadrille; but Mr. Atwood sat by her on the window-seat, and was even more interesting than in the dance.

Ann Duncan (now Mrs, Leslie) looked at them and thought of the diamond ring.

Mr. Atwood attended Kate to the supper table. She did not flirt; she was evidently pleased with him.

He handed her into the carriage, and Kate asked him to call upon her.

He called the next morning.

I hasten to the sequel.

The winter was not more than half finished when Ann received a diamond ring and a note from Kate, stating that she was once more engaged to be married, and before the end of winter there was a more splendid and elegant wedding. A larger and more fashionable party than we have before described.

A more beautiful bride and a handsomer bridegroom than Ann Duncan and Edward Leslie.

Kate Landon was married to Henry Eaton.

Solution — Lieutenant Atwood was Henry Eaton. The plot and fictitious name had been contrived by Ann Duncan and Edward Leslie

The climate and hariships of India had so changed Henry; his dress and manners were so altered, that Kate did not recognize him. After the wedding Kate received a diamond ring from Ann. She had not made a new engagement; only renewed an old one.

The Blonde Broncho.

"Did you ever see them buckskin bronchos of mine that I used to drive, named Yeller and Yaller?" asked Buck Bramel the other day of Gen. Worth, while he looked out across the green billowy divide toward the eternal whiteners of the snowy rango.

"Why, no; never head of 'em."

"Well," said Buck, as a tender light came in his blue eyes, ad a three-cornered nugget of tin-tag tobacco was stowed away in his cheek "both of them same cayuse plugs cold scoot over more mountain road beween sun and sun than anything in the line of hoss I ever see.

"Yeller was pretty middlin' rapid but Yaller was an imported terror. You ought to see him gather up his limbs in a wad and vanish. One day I was out on board of Yaller, tryin' to round up an American cow that had strayed away from the orral, and over west of the divide I woned up a long-legged buck antelope.

"I made a little shasay over toward the antelope to see him light out, but he first pranced along kind o careless like, as much as to say, 'I gues I won't give you no 2:13 gait this morning. Life is too brief. I can't run that way just to amaze every snoozer that comes this way on a blonde plug like this.'

"I touched up old Yaller with the quirt, and sailed over toward the antelope, thinkin' I'd stir him up a little.

"The antelope trottd along a few rods, and then looked back over his shoulders and smiled a sardonic smile, that made old Yaller as mad as a wet hen.

"Then he got up and got. Jewhilikins, how he pawsed the gravel! Occasionally the antelope would look around and snort, and jump tiff-legged, and laugh. Then old Yaller would consume some more spac..

"The antelope turned himself loose, and for a while all I could see was a little cloud of dust and the white spot that is always behind this amusin' little animal.

"After a while, however, I could see that the white patch got bigger. Yaller was gainin', I jabbed the Mexican spurs into him to encourage him. His tongue hung out so that he stepped on it every little while.

"He didn't laugh any more then. It was a terrible reality He seemed to think we had imposed on him somehow. Every little while he looked at old Yaller kind of reproachful, as if we'd taken advantage of him.

"By'n by I reached over and took him by the ears and laid him across the saddle ahead of me and took him home. I kept him for years, but he never rallied.

"He seemed to lose all hope, and would walk around the corral like an old billy-goat that had been betrayed some time. Life for him seemed to be nothing but a wide, shoreless vaste of bitter disappointment and regret.

"I tell you, General it takes the hope and joy and pride all out of a antelope to be scooped by a $16 buckskin broncho."

"Yes," said the General, "I should think it would. If I was a broken-legged antelope, with a foot done up in a gum overshoe, and couldn't outrun any buckskin hoss I ever saw, I'd go away to some lonely spot and stick my head into a prairie dog's hole, and die of remorse."

Sport in Saxony.

The peasant inhabitants of Saxony are perhaps the richest in the world. Want is scarcely known among them. Once a year a fair is held by the farmers, at which the horses are exhibited, and a race called the Flag Race is held. The animals used are only plow horses, and not trained for any such sports, and all sorts of comic scenes occur. Small trees grow at intervals on the race course, and the riders attempt to fell them as they pass. Whoever succeeds first in this endeavor is the winner of the race, is presented with a flag, and becomes the village hero on the spot.

Parson Briggs.

The other day Parson Biggs, an old-time preacher from "away in the country," paid his first visit to Little Rock. He went to the residence of old 'Squire Muckle, who at one time had lived in the parson's neighborhood. The Squire's family were exceedingly glad to see the parson, for years ago he had taken off his saddle at the Squire's gate: had eaten corn bread and cabbage with the family and had sung and prayed until the boys, who had plowed all day fell asleep. After singing the old familiar songs and praying the old familiar prayer, the 'Squire conducted the parson to the bed-room designed for the rest of the good old servant.

"What do you call this?" asked the parson, regarding with an air of interest a mosquito-bar suspended above the bed.

"Why, that is a mosquito-bar."

"What account is it?'

"To keep off mosquitoes."

"Brother Muckle, I thought that you were too sensible a man to give way to these town fixin's. You told me that when I came to see you that we would have a revival of the old days. Now you want to hang the thing over me. Take it down, please. I'm afraid that the vanity that I've allers heard lurked about these towns is taking a-hold of you."

The bar was taken down and the old man blew out his candle, which he always carried in his saddle-bag, with a "puff," and retired.

"The 'Squire and Mrs. Muckle slept in an adjoining room. They had been in bed but a few moments, when Mrs. Muckle remarked:

"What was that noise?"

"Pow, pang!" came from the adjoining room.

"I don't know what it is," answered the 'Squire, stuffing the corner of the pillow into his mouth.

"Slap!" came from the next room.

"Did you hear that?" exclaimed Mrs. Muckle.

"It's nothing," said the 'Squire.

"Something is shaking the bed, Mr. Muckle."

"Slap, slap!"

"Go in there and see what's the matter with the parson, Mr. Muckle."

"Chuck, chuck, chuck," was all that Muckle could say.

"You act like a man that hasn't got any sense. You'd lay here and see a man die in the next room."

"How can I lay here and (chuck) see a man in the (cnuck) next room? The door's shut and the lights out."

"Slap, bang!"

"You must go in there, Mr. Muckle."

"Why don't you go?"

"Think I'm going into a man's room? All right, if the old man dies it ain't my fault;" and Mrs. Muckle turned over and Muckle chuckled himself to sleep.

Next morning when the parson appeared at the breakfast table he presented a swollen appearance. His face was covered with bumps and his hands looked as though he had the nettle rash.

"I lay there and fit them things all night," he said solemnly. "Reckon you'd better put up that thin looking sheet," and bowing over his plate he said, "Gracious Lord, make us thankful for these, Thy many blessings."

An Indian Princess.

Princess Marie Lulu Nemenoosha, as she is called, now on her way West, is a member of the tribe of Blackfeet redskins. She is not a thoroughbred savage, for her father, Joe Lavagnie, was a famous French trapper and scout, for many years in the service of the United States. Nemenoosha is a comely woman about twenty eight years of age. She wears the usual Indian garb—gay colors, with strings of beads about her neck, and large ear-rings, crescent shaped, in her auriculars. A woman of more than ordinary intelligence, she converses well in several language. Maria Lulu has a very romantic history. Her father, while on a hunting excursion in 1847, was lost, but was picked up by some friendly Osage Indians, who treated him kindly, supplied him with food, as he was almost starved and took him to their camp. He became much attached to his red brethren, and married Nemenoosha, daughter of the chief, a girl of rare beauty.

Upon the death of his squaw's father, Lavagnie succeeded to the position of chief. To his wife a daughter was born. Lavagnie finally became tired of his wild mode of life, and, his wife having died, at the imminent risk of his life, he stole away with his infant child, two years old and reached Montreal, Can., in safety. The little girl was placed in a convent, where she remained until fourteen years of age. During this time Nemenoosha obtained a finished education, and learned to speak French fluently. Her father married the second time, and by his second wife had four children. About three years since Lavagnie died, leaving a handsome fortune, Nemenoosha's share of which would have been $16,000, but her stepmother proved her Indian birth, and the girl was cut off without a farthing. She knew nothing of her Indian origin until that time, and at once she went West, among her own people, where she was treated very kindly. Organizing a company of the wild red men, she went with them to Europe, and made a very successful tour of England, exhibiting in nearly all the leading cities of the United Kingdom. A few months ago the princess returned to this country, and is now on her way, with her husband, Wild Harry, to his ranch in Texas.

The Presidential Bullet.

In reviewing the case from an autopsical standpoint, it is quite easy to offer criticism. The stubborn facts of post-mortem always stand out in bold relief against decisions rendered ante mortem. But it must be recollected that there were peculiar difficulties in the case. They are best appreciated by all who have had experience in the treatment of gunshot wounds. However greatly we may regret that, in view of the great public importance of the case, a correct opinion as to the course of the ball was not made at the beginning and was not proven at the end, it is quite difficult to see how the error could have been avoided, There were no symptoms during life to point to the locality of the ball. But, even at the worst, as proving that the surgeons never knew during the life of the patient where the ball was located, there is nothing to show that in consequence of that error the patient suffered. The ball itself, by being firmly encysted, became harmless, while the real cause of all the trouble had its origin seemingly in the comminution of the eleventh rib. It is a matter for much congratulation that the bullet was not found in a pus cavity. Under such circumstances, even if it were impossible to remove the bullet, there would have been many who would have claimed that such an operation should have been attempted, or at least that the neglect to resort to such a procedure was indirectly the cause of the patient's death. But all doubts in such a direction are cleared up by the autopsy. On the supposition that the ball should have been extracted in any event, what have we not escaped? At least the wisdom of not cutting down upon the missile until the locality of the latter was clearly made out, cannot be gainsaid. As nearly two hours were consumed in finding the ball at the autopsy, what might have been the chances of extracting the missile during life?

Burglary Epidemic in London.

It is a curious satire upon the complacent boast that we are the most orderly and law-abiding nation in the world that the public should be discussing with eager interest whether the protection of life and property in the surburbs of London demands the arming of the police with cutlasses and revolvers. The murder of the policeman by burglars at Kingston has given point and urgency to the discussion, and there are not lacking symptoms that London is on the eve of a scare about burglars similar to the famous scare about garroters. Nor can it be denied that there is some ground for the general alarm. The long nights are setting in, and the housebreakers of the metropolis have begun the season with spirit. Burglaries, many of them—such as that at Kingston—giving evidence that the burglars are as ready with the revolver as with the jimmy, have been reported almost simultaneously in several directions, and as yet none of the marauders appear to have been arrested. The police statistics prove that burglarly is on the increase in London. In 1879, 903 cases were reported; but last year the number rose to 1,292, while the number of cases of shopbreaking increased in the same period from 302 to 393. Even after allowing a liberal margin for changes in classification, which vitiate so many statistical comparisons, this particular crime seems to be increasing in frequency. Unfortunately the number of burglars convicted has by no means kept pace with the increase of burglaries committed. in 1879 there were 162 convictions, or one conviction to every six cases, but in 1880 there were only 142, or one to every nine. In the same period there was reported an ominous increase in the number of other robberies, assaults with intent to rob, and cases of sacrilege. There were only twenty-nine cases of sacrilege, an offence closely akin to burglary. in 1879; but they increased by 200 per cent. in 1880; but although there were three convictions in 1879, in 1880 there were only five to eighty-five offences. If to these significant and disquieting figures we add the fact that murders in the metropolis rose last year from nine to seventeen, we have sufficient warrant for regarding the situation with considerable uneasiness.

A Bath Tub.

We have one in our house, and we have a bath room, too. How many farmers can say the same. Not one in a thousand, perhaps. I don't know of another farm house in all this country that has a bath tub. Every man and woman knows that frequent bathing is necessary to good health. Our family bathe three to four times a week in warm weather, and once a week in cold weather. My neighbors's wife told us, that not one of her family had washed "all over" for a month. They had no bath tub, and had to use a wash tub or simply take a towel or sponge bath. A sponge bath is better than none, but cannot halfway come up to a good splash in a genuine bath tub. We got our bath tub—the zinc part—in town, and had a carpenter put it into a small bed room which we henceforth dubbed "the bath room" and used it for this purpose only, except to hang clothes in. It has a pipe leading outside into a large hole or cesspool. Of course we have to carry water to fill the tub, as we have no pipes to carry water through the house as in the city. But our stove has a large heating reservoir, which holds enough warm water to bathe the whole family. We intend to run a pipe from the cistern into the bath room, and have a pump that will pump water directly into the tub. Our bath room as arranged only cost us $10 and it is worth $100 a year, in health and comfort.

Dangerons Houses.

Houses that have been empty may become fever breeders when they come to be reoccupied. An English sanitary officer alleges that he has observed typhoid, diptheria or other zymotic affections to arise under these circumstances. The cause is supposed to be in the disuse of cisterns, pipes and drains, the process of putrefaction going on in the impure air in the unobstructed access of this air to the house, while the closure of windows and door effectually shuts out fresh air. Persons moving from the city to their country homes for the summer, should see that the drains and pipes are in perfect order, that the cellar and closets are cleared of rubbish, and the house thoroughly aired before occupying. Carbolic acid used freely in the cellar is a good and cheap disinfectant.

Wounds and hardships provoke our courage, and when our fortunes are at the lowest, our wits and minds are commonly at the best.

Yesterday—the natural source of histories. To-morrow—the mother of all mysteries. To-day—a jewelled moment set between.

The man whose thoughts, motives, and aspirations and feelings are all devoted to himself is the poorest of judges as to the effect of his own action on other men.

Attempt to Shoot Guiteau.

A second attempt was made to shoot Guiteau on Saturday, while he was conveyed fro m the court room to jail. The occurrence is detailed by police officer W. J. Edelin, who has been detailed to accompany Guiteau from and to the jail. Officer Edelin says they left the court house about 2.40 p. m. and moved at the usual pace down D. street. He noticed no one near the van until opposite the Holmes house, D. street and New Jersey avenue. Here was a man on horseback. He noticed the horseman, because he had seen his face in the court room and also sitting on his horse near the City Hall. Riding near the van, the stranger seemed anxious to get a look at the prisoner, but Edelin said to him: "There's nothing in there for you to see." With this the horseman t urned about and Edelin did not see him again until on First street, near East Capitol street. There he rode up from behind, and as the van turned into East Capitol street, he was on his left. Dropping behind he peered through the rear grating, and evidently satisfying himself as to the position of the occupant of the van, pushed his horse quickly to the left of the van. From this point, and before the officer could discover that he had a pistol, he fired a shot through the side of the vehicle and then wheeled suddenly back toward First street. Edelin fired at him. Without waiting to inquire after the condition of the prisoner, the van was started in pursuit of the horseman, but time was lost in turning over the car tracks on East Capitol street, and the fugitive had too good a start. The van pursued as far as K street, down which the horseman fled, but he was soon lost to sight.

When Guiteau was asked whether he was hurt he only caught hold of his left arm and was thus taken to his cell. There a reporter found him washing, having just changed his shirt. There were two holes in the left sleeve of his coat, below the elbow, but neither the sleeve of his shirt nor that of his undershirt were injured. Cutting away the sleeve of the latter it was found that the concussion from the ball, as it passed through the coat sleeve, had brought blood to the surface of the arm just below the elbow, but there was no rupture of the skin. Dr. McWilliams, the assistant jail physician, directed applica tions of ice, and in a few moments the prisoner had forgotten to attend to the injured limb.

A man that goes by the name of Bill Jones was arrested in the evening, as the fellow who shot at Guiteau, but when officer Edelin was bronght to identify him he said to the officers and reporters: "Gentlemen, that is not the man. I should know the man among a million. I not only fail to identify this man Jones as the man, but I could swear tha the is not the man."

It is to be hoped for the honor of the country that all attempts to kill Guiteau will fail. Let the miserable wretch have a fair trial, and if found guilty as no doubt he will he should be hung under the law.

The Assassin's Trial.

The trial of Guiteau, the assassin of President Garfield, is now in progress at Washington. Much interest is shown over it, not only in Washington but throughout the entire country. The court room where the trial is held is daily crowded to its utmost capacity. There is a morbid curiosity to see the wicked man who assassinated the lamented President. Guiteau's strange conduct during the trial thus far has forfeited what little sympathy there may have been for him. His boundless egotism and vanity, his violent anger, exceed, if possible, his utter depravity and wickedness. He flies into fits of rage, scolds the witnesses, quarrels with his lawyers and insults the judge. Several times did Judge Cox threaten to remove him for h is unruly conduct and conduct the trial in his absence, but this always cows him and he becomes alittle m ore decent for a time He plays the crazy man to perfection but the general belief is that he is more wicked th an insane. In fact he is beginning to be considered a prodigy of depravity—a very fiend incarnate.

An exchange gives the legal test of insanity when it is made a plea of defense in cri minal prosecutions. If these few plain rules are the law on the question it would not seem difficult to determine when a criminal is legally insane and not accountable for his acts. Their application in Guteau's case will clearly le ad to the conclusion that his insanity is simply a sham. The tests are these: Did the accuse d know the nature of his act? Did he know the act to be criminal? Did he act under a delusion as to some facts which, supposing the fact to exist, would justify the act?

THROUGHOUT the South and the Southwest evidences multiply that those sections are rapidly recovering from the results of "the late unpleasentness" and bid fair, before many years to take their place among the fore most of the agricultural and manufact uring portions of America. This is especially true of Georgia and Texas, both of which States have been the recipients of a large and valuable emigration that represents some of the working elements of the Old World. Great fields are being opened and cultivated a ccording to the best methods, capital is p ournig in at a steady pace, factories are erected, and the people are becoming i ndependent, to a certain extent, of the rest of mankind. It is this utilization of its own inherent wealth that will quickly make the South great, and the North will not begrudge an iota in the race for the supre mest prosperity. A rich South means a wealthy North, for it is in the nature of things that we of this section of the count ry must participate in the common growth and derive our share of all the blessings that may flow into the newly-made coffers.—Ex.

The Mifflinb urg Telegraph suggests that the republican party in Pennsylvania had better abolish the convention system of nominating candidates, on the score of economy. It would be much cheaper no doubt just to let the Camerons appoint our state and other officers outright and swear them in without the expensive and useless farce of nomination and election.

The Lewisburg Chronicle serves the following brief but pointed notice on some of the Stalwarts-Boss-Machine papers to stop abusing the Independents, lest they might be sorry for it. We hope the 50,000 will take no more "sass" from the Bosses but shake off the galling Cameron yoke entirely:

Some of the hot-headed Republican papers, led by the Harrisburg Telegraph, have adopted a course well calculated to drive the Independent voters outside of the Republican camp to return no more. This thing of tantalizing, despising, and denouncing over 50,000 as intelligent voters as the State ever produced, may sound musical to Stalwart ears, but the effect may be sad ly felt next fall. When people act conscientiously in a cause which they deem just and necessary, they are in no humor to calmly and silently gulp the biting irony of a victorious rival. If the Stalwarts really value their room more than their company, so be it. But we give what we deem consistent warning: If these 50,000 leave the Republican camp, they will not go alone; each man will take his neighbor; and 100,000 votes out of the Republican party will leave it in a deplorable condition. Better stop cursing this people, until you are sure that they desere it.

A FIGHT WITH AN EAGLE.

Frustrating the Bold Attempt of a Bird to Carry off a Boy.

From the Monroe (Ga.) Advertiser.

On last Thursday morning John Abernathy brought home a monster eagle into town, which he had killed on his place, four miles from Forsyth, the day previous. He had gone to a field to work, carrying his little son, two and a half years of age, with him. It happened that he had his shotgun in his hands, thinking that he would need it to kill game. Suddenly he heard a sound in the air, which he describes as equal to the roaring of the wind, and saw a large shadow on the ground. Looking up he saw a huge bird swooping down upon his son. As quick as possible he raised his gun and fired and was fortunate enough to bring the eagle to the ground. He picked him up and started homeward, carrying the bird on his shoulder. Suddenly the eagle buried his talons on his right arm and seized his left with his beak. Mr. Abernathy called for help, and some neighbors, four in number, came to his assistance. It required their united effort to release the bird from his firm hold. When relieved he found that his arm was badly lacerated, the flesh being torn from several places. The beak was sunk to the bone in the right hand. The eagle measured seven feet four inches from tip to tip and weighed seventeen and one-half pounds. He was never seen in the neighborhood before, and it is probable he strayed from the coast. Mr. Abernathy says his stre ngth was prodigious. He would have readily carried off the little boy had it not been that his father was fortunately armed with a gun.

JERKED FROM JUSTICE.

A Wisconsin Outlaw Lassoed in Court and Dragged Out and Hanged.

ST. PAUL, Minn., November 19.—A special to the Globe from Durand, Wis., gives the particulars of the lynching of Ed. Williams, one of the murderers of the Coleman brothers. He was caught in Hall county, Neb., last Saturday and conveyed to Durand, where he arrived yesterday. In court this afternoon he pleaded not guilty to the charge of murder. The court room was crowded and several men were outside. Williams had scarcely entered his plea and asked for time to procure witnesses when a noose was thrown over his neck. Those inside the court room shoved him to a window, while those outside pulled the rope and he was dragged some forty rods to a tree and hanged until he was dead.

LAST NOTICE.—All persons having unsettled accounts with the estate of Adam Zerby, late of Penn township, deceased, are hereby requested to meet the undersigned at the office of Jacob Eisenhuth, Esq., on MONDAY, DECEMBER 19TH, NEXT, for settlement, BUSY AS A BEAVER.—Neighbor Frank Kister is at it hard and heavy making about the neatest and best dress shoes ever seen in this section. Frank is an expert in the business, has lots of work and more coming, and what we particularly like about him he makes a real bona fide effort to avoid the common fault of shoemakers. tf.

MUTILATED COINS.—The nuisance of punching coins for pocket pieces is probably doomed. The United States government has fixed the following values on silver coins with holes in them:

	Cents.
Dollars	65
Half Dollars	35
Quarter dollars	15
Dimes	5
Fives	4

These values are placed upon coins so punched with a view to calling in and stopping the unlawful practice of "mutiliating" silver money in the United States.

—Next week is "court week" at Bellefonte and a great many of our people from the valleys will go courting, some as parties to vexatious law suits, others as jurors, but a much greater number as witnesses or spectators. Now it don't make much difference to Lewin in what particular capacity you come to town, but he cordially invites you all, without distinction of party, to call at his mammoth cloth ing store to examine his stock; for if you do that you are almost sure to buy. His assortment is so varied and full and his prices so exceedingly low that all can suit themselves to perfection. Lewin is your man for clothing.

—Next year there will be a lively political campaign in Pennsylvania. The state officers to be elected are Governor and Secretary of Internal Affairs. Besides this an entire delegation to congress, all the members of the legislature, and state senators in the even-numberd districts are also to be elected. The legislature elected next fall will have a new United States senator to elect. No doubt there will be three candidates for Governor and Secretary of Internal Affairs before the people, as the Independent or Wolfe element in the republican party will hardly support the Boss—Cameron—Machine candidates. The battle will be a triangular one and much more sanguine than this year.

News Miscellany.

The young man who adopts a course of reading for long winter evenings, and spends the greater portion of his leisure time in the company of instructive books will be the man of influence in the future.

The Pa. R R. has in round numbers 1,000 engines, 50,000 freight cars, and 10,000 passenger cars. This rolling stock, if linked in one train would almost reach from Philadelphia to Pittsburg.

Homicide in Lock Haven.

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., November 21.—The coroner's jury in the case of Mrs. Margaret Sullivan, who was found on Saturday lying at the foot of the stairs at her house suffering from injuries that resulted in her death, rendered a verdict to-night that deceased came to her death by means of some blunt instrument in the hands of her husband Eugene Sullivan. The accused is in jail and will have a hearing to-morrow.

Uriah Moyer Arrested.

Detective "Bully" Lyon, of Reading, who was instrumental in working up the Kintzler murder case in Snyder county, Saturday arrested Uriah Moyer, one of the alleged murderers, and who Ettinger, now dead, stated in his confession had fired the fatal shot. The prisoner was brought to Snyder county yesterday evening. Moyer has been living at Kalamazoo and Schoolcraft, Mich., since the murder was committed. His accomplices have been convicted and sentenced to be hanged December 12.

Farmers, Plant Trees.

It will be a matter of common interest to the farmer readers of the Democrat to learn that there is in existence and in full force a statute of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania by a knowledge of which many a dollar may be saved to them. It is to the effect that any person who shall transplant to the side of the public highway on his own premises any fruit, shade or forest trees of suitable size, shall be allowed by the supervisor, when the roads run through or adjoins cultivated fields, an abatement on his road tax of one dollar for every four trees set out. The trees must, however, be set out the year previous before the allowance will be granted and they must be alive and well protected. This law was enacted May 2d, 1879, and deserves the widest publicity.—Ex.

CHILDREN ON THE STREETS.—Parents and guardians should avail themselves of the long winter evenings now almost upon us wherein to impress the minds and enlist the attention of the girls and boys under their special charge. The twilight and early hours that make up the walking time after supper, are the harvest moments for bad influences to grow and thrive in young hearts. The education of the street is always productive of evil. It tends to the formation of habits which leads to a doubtful reputation. How many a bright boy has become proficient in wickedness that might have proved an ornament to society and a benefit to mankind, had his evening hours been spent at home. It is next to impossible for children to run the streets and escape the vices so common to the ignorant and vicious. It is upon the street at night the horrid oaths are uttered, the petty quarrel is made a pretext for more brutal work, and the first glass leads to irregular ways. Home can, with little effort, be made attractive. A few books, juvenile magazines and papers, with a smile and occasional word from their elders are all that is necessary, under ordinary circumstances, to keep within doors children and youth.—Philipsburg Journal.

THAT TERRIBLE LAMP.

The Carlisle Volunteer says: On Thursday evening last, after the family of Mr. Francis Mentzer, of Frankford township, Cumberland county, had retired, Mrs. Mentzer with several of the children remained up to sew carpet rags. The mother had finished a ball of carpet rags and playfully rolled it to the other end of the table to her youngest child, a little girl of four years, saying as she did so, "Now Minnie we'll go to bed." The little girl caught the ball and in an innocent way threw it back saying, "catch it mamma." But alas! this pleasant little family episode had a sudden and fearful termination. The ball struck the lamp, knocking it off the table into the mother's lap, where it exploded, saturating her clothing and igniting. Instantly her whole body was enveloped in flames and she screamed for help at the top of her voice. Mr. Mentzer rushed from his chamber to find the whole kitchen filled with flames and smoke, in which the form of his unfortunate wife was scarcely distinguishable. He at once caught her in his arms and did his utmost to smother the fire and tear away the burning clothes. In answer to her cries he carried her out where water was thrown upon her and the fire extinguished, but not until she was so severely burned that she died in about twenty hours afterward. Neighbors living a considerable distance away heard her screams and saw the fire and came running, believing the house to be on fire. None of the children who were in the kitchen at the time the sad accident occurred were burned. Dr. Bixler, of Blossville, and Dr. Hemminger, of Carlisle, were summoned and did all that medical skill could do to save the poor woman's life, but all in vain. Mr. M.'s hands were very severely burned in his effort to extinguish the fire. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, being one of the largest known in that section. One hundred and thirteen vehicles followed her remains to their final resting place. She was buried in the graveyard at the Brick church in Upper Frankford.

HOW to INCASE YOUR INCOME.

Just at this season of the year there are, among our readers, those looking for employment for the next six months. We have lately received from L. E. Brown & Co., the well-kown manufacturers of specialties for agents to handle a request to put them in communication with one or more suitable persons in this locality, to act as agenst in introducing several of their patent household articles to this community, and after consideration, we take this method to comply with their request. The firm are manufacturers of a large number of household articles, which they introduce to the public by means of agents, having sometimes as many as 1,000 persons in their employ. The particular articles which they seek to introduce here, at this time, are: Brown's Peerless Sifter, generally acknowledged to be the best in the world of which nearly one million were sold during the last year; the Kitchen Queen, the latest and best invention in Coil Oil Lamps and the only absolutely Safe Lamp made; the Centennial Cake and Bake Pan, and article which has a national reputation, and is the delight of every housekeeper; the Half Minute Egg Beater, which always sells at sight, and the new A to Relieve Bronze Profile Cast of JAMES A. GARFIELD, with memorial frame, the best selling article ever put into the hands of an agent, the best of all the portraits, chromos or steel engravings that have been offered. It is a truer likeness of the martyred hero than any we have ever seen before, and its price brings it within the reach of all. For this county, Messrs. Brown & Co. desire as many agents as can advantageously. Any smart, intelligent lady or gentlemen can make a fine income in this way. The firm will send to any responsible person free who will assume the agency here and go to work, a complete outfit of these goods, to the amount of five dollars. The reputation of this house is first rate; the goods are what they represent them to be. Their terms are liberal, and we advise those looking for genteel, remunerative employment to send to them for further information. Their address is—

A Railway through a Desert.

By the completion of the line of railway from Krasnovodsk to Kizil Arvat the Russian Government have finished the first section of the Transcaspian railway, which is intended to bring the territory recently conquered from the Turcomans into direct communication with both the Caucasus and the interior of Russia. The port of Kizil Arvat has long been one of some importance and during the eventful period of the last 10 years it has played a considerable part in Russian operations in this quarter, and now, as the actual terminal point of this railway, it is not likely to sink into insignificance. From Krasnovodsk, which, after the suggestions of several alternative places, seems destined to remain the principal Russian harbor on the eastern side of the Caspian, to Kizil Arvat the distance is about 200 miles. The country through which the line passes is mostly desert, lying between the Balkan ranges, and completely waterless, save at the few spots where wells are to be found. Of these, the principal are those at Mollah Kari, Tasgeer and Kayandjik. Although the acarcity of water has hitherto constituted an obstacle in the path of an army or of a caravan, it is probable that the Russian engineers are right in saying that a sufficient supply can always be procured en route for the engines, while the naptha springs of the Caspian provide a cheap and easily obtainable fuel. It is not to be expected that the Russians will remain long content with Kizil Arvat as the terminus of their new line, especially as a brisk trade is likely to spring up with the Turcomans, and also with the towns on the northern borders of Persia. East of Kizil Arvat the difficulties of engineering are very much less than those that presented themselves west of that place, although these were not very formidable, and have been successfully overcome. As Russia has formally annexed the region up to Ashkabad, which is about the same distance from Kizil Arvat that that place is from Krasnovodsk, there will probably be no further delay than financial considerations may impose in carrying the line to the capital of the new transcaspian province. The energy shown in improving their means of communication with this new possession is in striking contrast with the indifference or sluggishness exhibited by the Russian authorities in other parts of Asia. While Tashkend remains more remote from Moscow than our possessions at the antipodes are from London, and while the resources of Siberia are undeveloped for want of railroads and canals, the sandless months have witnessed the subjection of a brave race and the connection of their subdued territory with the main lines of communication in the empire. To pretend that this exceptional energy has not a peculiar significance would be to disregard facts, nor, although we may repeat that there is nothing unreasonable in Russia desiring to bring her latest Central Asian acquisition into direct communication with Tiflis or Derbend, can the plain fact be ignored that the first section in a line of railway must one day connect Russia with Meshed, and possibly with Herat also, has been successfully laid down and opened for traffic. It may very well be that at some future period we shall have to recognize in this peaceful triumph of human skill a circumstance not less pregnant with important consequences to the destinies of Asiatic peoples and powers than the fall of kingdoms and the destruction of dynasties.

Work of a Farmer's Wife.

I am a farmer's daughter, and a farmer's wife, and know how many hours of hard labor we have to perform from one year's end to another. I also know the ways and means contrived by ourselves to obtain a little pocket money which we may use as we please—not to spend "loafing 'round," but for the comforts of our homes. Still, with all the toil of a farm life, I would not exchange it for a life in town with double the income. Now, let me tell you some of the hard-working members of the Home how I have obtained quite a revenue the two past seasons. The head of the family said I could have all the poultry I could raise, but at the same time added that it would be time and trouble thrown away. I had turkeys and hens. The first year had poor success on accoubt of storms and accidents. The third year sold twenty-six dollars worth of eggs, and received over eighty dollars in the fall for my poultry, and did not get fancy prices. The third season (last summer and fall) I sold thirty-eight dollars worth of eggs, and my turkeys brought forty dollars. When I add that I did all the household work on a large farm, often milking, feeding hogs, and not one minute's help even in threshing time, you will acknowledge the money was well earned, but, as I look around the house, and see what comforts it has brought I wonder how I got along without them. Every dollar was used for something that would benefit the whole family, except a trifle given to some one whom I knew to be very needy. I find that young turkeys must have black pepper mixed with their food. It is also well to give a trifle of red pepper. Give them corn meal after they are ten days old, but scald it in sour milk, in a kettle kept for the purpose. If they are cooped up their coop must be moved every day or they will die. If young turkeys have a turkey mother, she will be apt to keep them dry through quite a storm. When they are reared with a hen they must be furnished with a shelter when it rains. Now, how many rosy lassies in the Home circle are going to volunteer to rise at five o'clock every morning from now till the first day of June next, and prepare breakfast with her own hands while tired mother naps?

Paradise.

The boys had been telling a few fish, turtle and snake stories, to which he listened attentively. When they had all finished, old Mossy gave a pitch or two and unlimbered. "Wall boys, I never have doubted any sort o' huntin' story sence my turtle scrape down on the bottom." the boys all looked inquiringly and he proceeded: "I was poking round down thar one day last year when I came across the darndest old lookin' turtle I ever seen. Why, the moss was an inch thick on his back, and the old cuss could hardly wiggle his tail. I cut a stick to measure the depth of the moss on his back and accidently scraped off a hunk of it, when I seen some letters. So I scraped it all off, and thar in big letters was writ 'B. C.,' followed by the figures '567.' Wall, I stud up kinder faint like, and tuk my hand off on him to sorter rub my old head, when he fetched a flop to git away and slid down the bank a bit and turned clean over, when I'll be dogened, if thar warn't printed in the biggest kind o' capitals on his belly just ahind his forelegs, 'Adam,' and down a little furder, nigh his hind leg (in the same style that they put the ame of the town on dog collars), was printed in small type, 'Paredise!'"

AGRICULTURAL.

BARLEY FOR FEEDING.—In this country barley is used mainly for brewing; in Europe and Eastern countries it is fed to stock, particularly horses. As compared to oats it is more nutritious and less heating. The product of an acre of barley is of more value as food for horses or other animals than the product of an acre of oats of equal quality. The grain being harder when dry than oats, it cannot be consumed so well in a raw state, but if fed ground it should be soaked in water or boiled. When ground and fed in conjunction with cut fodder, there is nothing superior as food for working teams. Barley to keep the system open and the skin soft. So long as our American farmers grow barley with no use for it in view but malting, so long will it be subject to extreme fluctuations in price, and the business a risky and uncertain one for the grower. But when the value of it for feeding stock is realized the market will be steadier and the profits of the crop more certain. Many farmers grow both barley and oats, the one to sell and the other to feed. It would be wiser, if the soil is good for barley—as most all soils are—to grow a portion at least for feeding purposes instead of oats. Ground barley is an excellent food for fattening hogs. We know from actual experience that horses will perform as much labor when fed on barley as they do when fed on oats. During the Mexican war all the grain that horses and mules had from the time the army left Jalapa for the interior was barley and corn, but mostly barley. Cavalry horses as well as those used for teaming purposes, could not be in better condition than they were.

[Jackson (Mich.) Daily Patriot.]

We learn from Messrs. Moore & Humphrey, that St. Jacob's Oil is regarded as the very best selling liniment ever sold, and is giving the highest satisfaction. It has effected many good cures.

SHELTER FOR FARMS.—The importance of shelter has been long and well understood by gardeners. Wall protection has been in use from time immemorial. Every skillful horticulturist is aware that tender plants will survive severe winters when surrounded or overshadowed by evergreens trees, and the same result has been observed on plants growing in the big woods. The shelter of high picket fences, in parallel rows, enabled Frederick Tudor, of Nahant, to transform a bleak surface, where the ocean tempest and spray prevented the growth of a single natural shrub or tree into one of the most luxuriant gardens of the country. But the importance of shelter on farms, and more especially for the protection of crops, over which the cutting winds of winter sweep freely, is injuriously affected in many ways. The snow, which should form a protecting mantle, is swept off into drifts, and the bare earth subjected to the full action of the hardest frosts. Young plants of grass and tender grain and growing crops are beaten about and often actually torn out by the action of the strong wind upon them, even in the spring and summer seasons. This every observing farmer must have seen. Sweeping tempests beat down grain fields, level the heavy grass of meadows and break and injure fields of corn more or less every season on our prairies.

To avoid these evils we must resort to tree-planting. Every farmer should have a wood-belt at least four rods wide on the north and west line of his barn. This should be kept fenced on both sides, so as to allow the young trees ample protection from the ravages of stock. Belts of fast-growing trees may be planted, and will afford good protection after a lapse of a comparatively few years, and then a part of the timber will prove eminently valuable for fuel and fencing.

[Washington Critic.]

Saved by Oil.

Mrs. Susanna Asmus, No. 11 Bartlett street, Baltimore, Md., had for twenty-two years been a sufferer from sores and pains in her limbs. She tried many remedies without any favorable results. Happening to hear of St. Jacob's Oil, she concluded at last to try it. The result was wonderful The sore healed, the pains vanished, and she is now well again.

HENS LOSING FEATHERS.—It is no indication of disease that hens should be losing their feathers. Some fowls begin their annual molt very early, and this is to be desired rather than complained of, as the recovery is more rapid in warm weather. It is advisable to give a little cooling medicine to molting fowls. A dram of saltpeter may be dissolved in a pint of water and given for a drink each day for a dozen fowls. Corn should not be given freely, but barley or wheat substituted in part. Some chopped vegetables would also be useful, and a run on a grass field. Fresh, clean water is especially necessary while the fowls are in their present weakened condition.

Baby Saved.

We are so thankful to say that our baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength.—The Parents, Rochester, N. Y.

TREATMENT OF WINDGALLS.—If the windgalls are present and are not old ones they may be treated by applying a strong solution of alum by means of a folded piece of cloth dipped in it and bound upon the swelling. With this pressure made be applied by means of pads bound on the puffs with bandages, keeping them on two hours a day at first, and gradually increasing the time until they can be borne continuously. If the puffs are made sore by pressure the pads should be removed for a time.

A CANADIAN farmer has thirty acres of beans which were put in by a seed drill. By leaving out the tubes the drills have been run thirty inches apart, which is just the right distance for cultivating with a scuffler. As many beans can thus be put in a day as any other grain, which is a great advantage over the old system of hand planting.

Vegetine Cured His Daughter.

CALLIERSVILLE, Chilton Co., Ala., May 15, 1878.

Dear Sir:—My daughter has been afflicted with nasal catarrh, affection of bladder and kidneys, and is of scrofulous diathesis, and, after having exhausted my skill and the most eminent physicians of Selma, I at last resorted to the use of your VEGETINE (without confidence) and, to my great surprise, my daughter has been restored to health. I write this as a simple act of justice, and not as an advertising medium. Respectfully,

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir,—One year ago last fall my little boy had a breaking out of Erysipelas and Salt Rheum, his face being one mattered sore of the worst description. Noticing your advertisement in the papers, I purchased two bottles of the VEGETINE, and, with the two bottles, my son was cured. I never saw anything like the Vegetine; it worked like a charm. I have been city watchman at Rome for years. This testimonial is gratuitous. Yours, respectfully,

HORATIO GRIDLEY.

Remarkable Cure of Scrofulous Face

WESTMINSTER, CONN., June 19, 1879.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir,—I can testify to the good effect of your MEDICINE. My little boy had a SCROFULA sore break out on his head as large as a quarter of a dollar, and it went down his face from one ear to the other, under his neck, and was one solid mass of sores. Two bottles of your valuable VEGETINE completely cured him. Very respectfully,

MRS. G. R. THATCHER.

ANOTHER love tragedy: "I know that I am not beautiful, Adelbert, and in my jealous moments it comes to me with a great throb—the power of beauty over man. Soft, pearly flesh, rounded curves, sweet, red lips, velvety eyes—all the magic of tint and texture of outline—when I think of this, I say, I am in utter despair," and the proud girl crushed with cruel force between her white, tapering fingers a flower-pot that stood with others in the window. The noise attracted the attention of her father, who was passing by and he pushed aside the curtains and entered. * * * "How much will a new window cost?" said Mr. McAnerny to his agent the next morning. "Did he take the sash with him?" "Yes." "About $15." Two years later Violet McAnerny married a man who owned two garbage carts, four mules and a big tin trumpet. But her heart was desolate and her young love blighted.

"The Doctor Told Me to take a blue pill, but I didn't do it, for I had already been poisoned twice by mercury. The druggist told me to try Kidney-Wort, and I did. It was just the thing for my biliousness and constipation, and now I am as well as ever." Torpid kidneys and liver is the trouble, for which Kidney-Wort always proves to be the best remedy known.—Hartford Courant.

A DUTIFUL son-in-law: A young Frenchman, who had sown a large crop of wild oats, determined to get married and settle down. On his wedding day his mother-in-law said to him: "I hope my dear son-in-law, that you will be guilty of no more follies in the future." "My dear madame," he replied, "I promise you that this shall be the last!"

THE successful man has many imitators in his peculiar line of business, but still there is only one originator. So, also, the great petroleum hair renewer, Carbolene, as now improved and perfected, holds the palm against all imitators as a genuine article of merit. Try it.

PECULIARITIES of journalism: Newspaper men don't go into business places and say: "See here, I don't like the way you arrange your show window, and I am going to have it fixed." Not at all. But other men are continually coming into newspaper offices with similar complaints. Isn't it about time that people looked upon a newspaper as a business operation.

"THIS butter, Mr. Spicer," said the dealer, "carried off the prize at the farmers' fair;" and Seth spat out a taste of the compound, and remarked: "Unless the prize was a ship's anchor and chain cable I should think the butter could have carried it off easily."

A VERY absent-minded man, who often asked a friend to dine with him, but almost always forgot to be himself at home on the day named, meeting a friend in the street, said: "Come and dine with me on Thursday," and added, graciously: "I will be there."

VEGETINE.—The great success of VEGETINE as a cleanser and purifier of the blood is shown beyond a doubt by the great numbers who have taken it, and received immediate relief, with such remarkable cures.

Is life worth living? "It makes no difference when a man dies," remarked Brown in an argumentative way." "Very true," remarked Fogg; "therefore I prefer to die when I am very old."

WHAT IS GOOD FOR MAN IS GOOD FOR BEAST.

MR. J. A. WALTON is one of the most prominent stable proprietors and blooded-stock owners in the northern part of the city of Philadelphia.—1245 N. Twelfth street. Mr. W. has devoted the best years of his life to the study and training of horses, and he is considered an authority in all matters pertaining to horseflesh. Feeling desirous of hearing what he had to say in propria persona regarding the merits of ST. JACOBS OIL as a remedy for some of the ills that horseflesh is heir to, the writer resolved to go direct to Mr. Walton's stables for the purpose of interviewing him on the subject. Mr. Walton talked freely upon the matter and said: "After many years active experience I can safely say that I consider ST. JACOBS OIL a remarkably good liniment for horses for anything like limbs, bruises and similar affections. I have used ST. JACOBS OIL on dozens of horses, and can state know it to fail. It is now about six months since I first commenced using that OIL on my horses, and I shall continue to use it. I happened to commence using ST. JACOBS OIL on horses in this way: My father is over eighty years of age and is subject to many of the ailments incident to old age. Among other things he has Rheumatic attacks, pains in his limbs and joints, and aches in different parts of his body. He commenced using ST. JACOBS OIL several months since, and after rubbing himself freely with the liniment night and morning, according to the printed directions, he obtained the most decided relief. Whenever he has any pain now he uses ST. JACOBS OIL and it always drives the pain away. Now I fully know from personal observation that 'What is good for man is good for beast.'"—Further reports bring the gratifying intelligence that Aristides Welsh, Esq., of Erdenheim Stock-Farm, near Philadelphia, Pa., the breeder of that famed racer, Iroquois, above represented, uses and strongly endorses ST. JACOBS OIL as a wonderful remedy in its effects upon his stock. His experience with the Great German Remedy justified him in giving his unqualified indorsement of it, and in saying that his chief groom should always use it on the farm. 60

I THINK," said a vegetarian, once, in conversation, "that when a man lives on beef he becomes something like an ox; if he eats mutton he begins to look sheepish; and if he eats pork may he not grow to be swinish?" "That may be," said his friend, "but when a man lives on nothing but vegetables, I think he's apt to be pretty small potatoes."

Truth and Honor.

Query:—What is the best family medicine in the world to regulate the bowels, purify the blood, remove costiveness and biliousness, aid digestion and tone up the whole system? Truth and honor compels us to answer, Hop Bitters, being pure, perfect and harmless.—Ex.

A TWO-EDGED sort of a girl: She (bewitchingly)—'Oh, I am so glad you're going to see me to my carriage, Mr. Browne!" He (flattered)—"Indeed, and why?" She—"Oh, because the girls are so jealous, and I want to prove that I do not monopolize all the good-looking men." Browne satisfied, but not so happy as he expected to be.

BEAUTIES of a free country: Things are getting down pretty fine, Fogg thinks. He went into an eating house the other day. Calling to a waiter he said: "Will you take my order?" "I will take your request, sir," responded the gentlemanly attendant.

A GENTLEMAN from Indiana recently registered in an Illinois hotel and looked at the printed notice in the bed-room, "Please do not blow out the gas." The occupant of the adjoining room heard him remark, "I pay my money and I'm going to blow out the gas if I want to."

Important to Travelers.

Special inducements are offered you by the Burlington Route. It will pay you to read their advertisements to be found elsewhere in this issue.

OUT of proportion: An Oil City man purchased a small hand bellows, took it home and told his wife he had concluded to blow out his brains; whereupon she replied that a smaller sized bellows would have answered the purpose.

THE English language: Sam Johnson says that the wost kind of a "widder" to be struck wid is to be struck wid a brick.

CASES are constantly occurring in every family where, if Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup were used in time the Cough and Cold would give no further trouble.

A KIND father: The father of a St. Louis bride presented his son-in-law with 80,000 head of cattle. "Papa, dear," exclaimed his daughter, when she heard of it, "that was so kind of you; Charley's awful fond of ox-tail soup."

TOP of the style: A young lady's hat blew off and was run over by a broad-wheeled cart. The ribbons were somewhat soiled, but the hat is now the very latest fall shape.

SORE eyes, tetter, salt rheum, etc., are cured by "Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher." Sold by all druggists. Never fails.

TRUE piety: Vermont men are religious even under the most trying circumstances. A deacon recently asked prayers of the congregation "for the low-lived son of a pirate that stole his melons."

WHEN a woman leaves a man who has not earned his salt for years, he immediately advertises that he will pay no debts of her contracting.

PROMPT relief in sick headache, dizziness, nausea, pain in the side, etc., guaranteed by taking "Sellers' Liver Pills."

MARK TWAIN, lecturing on the Fiji islands, offered to show how the cannibals ate their food if any woman would lend him a baby. The lecture had to go on unillustrated.

CONSOLATION: "My Love is Gone" is the title of the latest song written by a young man in Boston. Of course, this is rough, but "the absent girl eats no oysters."

DRUGGISTS say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy for female complaints they ever heard of.

"I never have any trouble," said a seedy vocalist, "to get on the high notes. It is the loan notes that trouble me."

IT would be well for talkative people to take a lesson of the trees and profit by their example so as to keep some things shady.

Don't Die in the House.

Ask Druggists for "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, roaches, flies, bed-bugs. 15c.

Than God for Anakesis.

WELLFLEET, MASS., April 10, 1876.

MESSRS. NEUSTAEDTER & CO.

Dear Sirs: Enclosed you will find one dollar, for which please send me a box of Anakesis. Direct it to Muiford Rich, Jr., Wellfleet, Barnstable Co., Mass. My wife has suffered terribly with piles for ten years, and had tried all kinds of remedies that she could hear of without much relief. Last summer I happened to hear of Anakesis when I was in Boston and so I procured a box and she experienced immediate relief. She says she can exclaim with the celebrated professor: Thank God for Anakesis! She gave part of the contents of the box to a friend of hers in Provincetown, and they helped her so that she sent the next day and bought some. The most of the inhabitants of this place and vicinity are sea-faring people, and by being exposed to wet and cold, a hard pulling at ropes, nine out of ten are troubled with piles, and have tried so many remedies without relief that they are discouraged and have no faith in anything, but I know that they are a good article. Now I will tell you my plan; I am a peddler and travel in Barnstable county, and times are so hard that money is very scarce, but if I can afford it this summer I want to buy about a dozen boxes on purpose to give away to the unbelievers, and I think that by so doing, and being acquainted with so many people, that I could get up quite a trade in Anakesis if you would give me the sole right of this county.

Yours truly,

MULFORD RICH, JR.

HEALTH IS WEALTH.

WEALTH of BODY is WEALTH of MIND.

Radway's SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

Pure blood makes sound flesh, strong bone and a clear skin. If you would have your flesh firm, your bones sound without caries, and your complexion fair, use Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

A remedy composed of ingredients of extraordinary medical properties essential to purify, heal, repair and invigorate the broken-down and wasted body—QUICK, PLEASANT, SAFE and PERMANENT in its treatment and cure.

No matter by what name the complaint may be designated, whether it be Scrofula, Consumption, Syphilis, Ulcers, Sores, Tumors, Boils, Erysipelas, or Salt-Rheum, diseases of the Lungs, Kidneys, Bladder, Womb, Skin, Liver, Stomach or Bowels, either chronic or constitutional, the virus of the disease is in the BLOOD which supplies the waste, and builds and repairs these organs and wasted tissues of the system. If the blood is unhealthy, the process of repair must be unsound.

The Sarsaparillian Resolvent not only is a compensating remedy, but secures the harmonious action of each of the organs. It establishes throughout the entire system functional harmony, and supplies the blood-vessels with a pure and healthy current of new life. The skin, after a few days use of the Sarsaparillian, becomes clear and beautiful. Pimples, Blotches, Black Spots and Skin Eruptions are removed; Sores and Ulcers soon cured. Persons suffering from Scrofula, Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Mouth, Ears, Legs, Throat and Glands, that have accumulated and spread, either from uncured diseases or mercury, or from the use of Corrosive Sublimate, may rely upon a cure if the Sarsaparillian is continued a sufficient time to make its impression on the system.

One bottle contains more of the active principles of medicines than any other preparation. Taken in Teaspoonful Doses, while others require five or six times as much. One Dollar Per Bottle.

MINUTE REMEDY.

Only requires minutes not hours to relieve pain and cure acute disease.

RADWAY'S Ready Relief, in from one to twenty minutes, never fails to relieve PAIN with one thorough application; no matter how violent or excruciating the pain the Rheumatic, Bed-ridden, Infirm, Crippled, Nervous, Neuralgic or prostrated with disease man suffer, RADWAY'S READY RELIEF will afford instant ease.

Fever and Ague.

FEVER and AGUE cured for 50 cents. There is not a remedial agent in this world that will cure Fever and Ague, and other Malarious, Bilious, Scarlet, Typhoid, Yellow and other fevers (aided by Radway's Pills) so quickly as RADWAY'S READY RELIEF.

It will in a few moments, when taken according to directions, cure Cramps, Spasms, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Colic, Wind in the Bowels, and all Internal Pains.

Travelers should always carry a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief with them. A few drops in water will prevent sickness or pains from change of water. It is better than French brandy or bitters as a stimulant.

Miners and Lumbermen should always be provided with it.

CAUTION.

All remedial agents capable of destroying life by an overdose should be avoided. Morphine, opium, strychnine, arnica, hyosciamus, and other powerful remedies, does at certain times, in very small doses, relieve the patient during their action in the system. But perhaps the second dose, if repeated, may aggravate and increase the suffering, and another dose cause death. There is no necessity for using these uncertain agents when a positive remedy like Radway's Ready Relief will stop the most excruciating pain quicker, without entailing the least difficulty in either infant or adult.

THE TRUE RELIEF.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF is the only remedial agent in vogue that will instantly stop pain.
